

#4

How could HypsIRI emissivity benefit from geostationary satellites?

Zhenglong Li#, Jun Li#, Yue Li#, Timothy J. Schmit@, Lihang Zhou@,
Mitchell D. Goldberg@ and W. Paul Menzel#

Email: zhenglong.li@ssec.wisc.edu

Cooperative Institute for Meteorological Satellite Studies, University of Wisconsin-Madison
@ Center for Satellite Applications and Research, NESDIS/NOAA

SEVIRI LSE diurnal variations

- Evaluation of HypsIRI emissivity precision and accuracy using GEO measurements
- GEO measurements as proxy for HypsIRI to study the impacts of temporal frequency and spatial coverage
- Synergetic use of HypsIRI and GEO measurements for surface emissivity and temperature products